Editor's Comments

AN unique coast-to-coast television news conference was held on Wednesday, June 18. We were privileged to be one of those in attendance.

In nine centres from Halifax to Vancouver, newsmen were gathered in television stations to hear the story of the new Canadian micro-wave system.

At Ottawa, spokesmen for the CBC, and the telephone people who handled the construction, outlined the planning for the new system, the construction program and future plans.

Then reporters from nine centres fired questions to a panel in Ottawa. Three questions from each station, 27 in all, were fielded deftly and generally satisfactory answers were given. Questioners from Regina included Mary Ann Fitzgerald of the Leader-Post, Ron MacDonald of Travel and Information Services and Earl Huston, president of the Regina Chamber of Commerce.

And it was Mr. MacDonald who asked the most intriguing question: "Can press conferences like this be arranged in the future?" For here was a truly Canadian event linking Canadians from coast to coast. Men and women in eight provinces were able at one time, through the medium of television, to question a panel at Ottawa. They were able to see and talk to the panel and were seen and heard across Canada.

Regular press conferences of this nature undoubtedly would contribute to a better understanding of Canada by Canadians. Even though the cost factor may be high, we hope that consideration will be given to more of these conferences in the future—and that the public will be able to see them also.

INAUGURAL PROGRAM

When Pacific links with Atlantic July 1 through the magic of the first all-Canadian coast-to-coast television network, 40 TV cameras switch on to provide the view for millions of electronic picture windows across the country.

In 60 busy minutes, viewers of both French and English networks will have a front seat for a panorama of Canada. Every network TV station in Canada will be joined together on this longest TV network in the world, with contributions from both CBC and independent stations.

Pickup points for the inaugural program include Charlottetown, Halifax, Saint John, Quebec City, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Niagara Falls, Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Regina, Edmonton, Calgary, Vancouver and Vancouver Island. The program is scheduled live sea to sea for 3 p.m. C.S.T., July 1st.

In Halifax, cameras will be located by the dockside for shots of divers in action; Saint John scenes will include H.M.C.S. Bonaventure in drydock; and in Charlottetown, cradle of Confederation, more nautical scenes including part of the lobster fleet.

Quebec City is observing its 350th anniversary at this time and TV cameras will pick up scenes from the famous Plains of Abraham and show ships of four navies in the port. Then it's to Montreal for panoramic views of Canada's biggest and most cosmopolitan city.

Ottawa is celebrating its 100th anniversary as the capital as CBC cameras scan the familiar sights around Parliament Hill to centre on a famous Canadian . . . Superintendent Henry Larsen, captain of the R.C.M.P. ship St. Roch, first vessel through the long-sought Northwest Passage. The captain will talk along the network to some of his old crew members just outside Vancouver where the St. Roch has been beached as part of a marine museum.

Seaway construction highlights the video visit to Toronto, and in Niagara Falls, of course, the key point is history with a good view of the mighty falls as well.

Manitoba's Golden Boy shines on high from the Legislative Buildings in Winnipeg as the network origination point switches to the gateway to the West; while farther west again Canadians from coast to coast can marvel at some of the massive farm machinery of days gone by as cameras focus on Saskatoon's Pioneer; then to Regina to discuss the prairies' number one subject, wheat, with a district farmer.

At Calgary, cameras set up at the CBC's video tape relay centre in the heart of the foothills city show this vital link in the TV network, then swing around for a view of the distant Rocky Mountains; cameras visit Canada's first civic airport, in Edmonton, to pick up First World War pilot Captain James Bell, manager of the airport since it opened in 1928, and maybe even go inside the flight control centre; and down in the southern portion of the province the camera's inquisitive eye seeks out drilling wells and cattle on the rolling range.

Over the mountains there's a video stop at Kitsilano Beach, near Vancouver, at the St. Roch; a look at the beach; a panorama of the city; and an interview with helicopter pioneer Carl Agar. Still in the Vancouver area, the next view is from Burrard Inlet, showing coastal steamers preparing for trips to the north, the Lion's Gate Bridge and another look at Vancouver. And for an unusual link with history, a talk with Captain Gates, whose father was present when the last spike . . . the golden spike . . . was driven in to complete another significant communication link across Canada, the C.P.R.

Westernmost visit on this video tour across country is to a logging camp on Vancouver Island for a chat with Nit Clarke, full blooded Indian logging foreman, among the mighty firs in the island forests . . . all part of Canada, almost a quarter of a world from sea to sea, linked visually with the flick of a switch through the CBC-TV network.

CKOS-TV YORKTON

As this magazine goes to press, June 19, Yorkton's TV station will be having their official opening, a worthy achievement to mark Yorkton's 75th anniversary year.

Directors of the Yorkton Television Company are well known business men of Yorkton, Norman Roebuck, President; Secretary-Treasurer, Ronald L. Skinner who is also General Manager of CKOS-TV. The man responsible for sales is Harold Olsen; technical director, George Skinner; Lawrence Dubois, transmitter operator; Alan Clasky, news editor; Hugh Vassos, artist; Miss Kristin Olson, program director; and Miss Eileen Risling, receptionist in charge of traffic—besides a group of skilled audio and video men and writers.

Invited guests for the opening ceremony included Hon. A. G. Kusiak, Minister of Natural Resources, who declared the station on the air, representatives of the government, Canadian Broadcasting Company, TV, radio and press personnel.

Congratulations to CKOS-TV.

LORA BURKE LOOKS

What Do You Think?

The Great Movies series, which began early this spring, has saved Saturday night TV for those of us who like to stay awake while we're being entertained.

With Fred Davis, able m.c. from Front Page Challenge, to introduce the films, explain a bit about circumstances which inspired the plot and tell us what has happened to the careers of actors involved—most of whom were or still are big names in the entertainment world—the program becomes just that: a program, rather than simply filling in a couple of hours telecasting time with any old movie that happens to be around.

It's true that all or most of these movies have been edited a bit to fit them into the 90 minutes program time. However, this is probably all to the good. Most movies are a trifle too long, anyway—filled with odds and ends of extraneous matter that doesn't affect the plot one way or another: a bit player given a chance to emote—a gorgeous but meaningless camera pan over a harbour or mountain or back alley—a musical number that could have been cut in half or omitted altogether—and so on. Many movies are a little like a dear old lady's living room decor; when you take away the surplus doilies and satin-sheathed pillows and Aunt Ethel's afghan, you can see the lines of the furniture and the shape of the room. And so with a film: remove the fripperies and you're left with the best lines of the plot and the shape of the story.

It's an interesting thing about these Great Movies: actually, the majority of them were not great movies at all. They were delightful movies, or hair-raising movies—but very rarely great movies. Still, they had something that has enabled them to reappear on the little screen after all these years without looking old-hat or—what is much worse—making you feel old because you remember seeing them before.

Most movies shown on TV seem chosen at random from a huge back-log of pictures that rated B or even C when they were brand new. Personally, I find myself conscious of how odd the women's hats and dresses look, and am perfectly amazed by the nipped-in cut of the men's double-breasted suits. Not so with the Great Movies: they rise above the trivia of hairdo and shoe-shape in a triumph of good, close-packed entertainment.

And so my thanks to whoever had the inspired idea of giving us the Great Movies and of presenting them in just this way: edited a little to produce an even better, more tightly-woven story than in the beginning and made into an interesting program by Fred Davis' entr'acte comments. There are any number of American, British, Italian and French films on which to draw for more Great Movies—and so make Saturday night worth looking at for a long time to come.
